Comment: I view WDKY off air broadcast. I live in Versailles. IT is well known throughout the Lexington area that the DTV (HDTV) broadcast falls far short of serving the metro Lexington market. I can view the analog signal fine, but as we all know now, that will be turned off soon. I cannot receive the DTV signal, as many many others cannot as well.

Are there any plans to relocate this transmission? I really would prefer to keep receiving FOX broadcast into next year, and without doing anything to improve this situation it seems that FOX is simply willing to let a pretty good sized market just fall by the wayside.

Please tell me you have some plans to remedy this situation.

Comment: I was wondering if FOX will be going digital at all before Feb next year. I just bought a DTV convertor and I am only able to view Channels 18, 27, and 36. FOX is one of my favorite channels and I would love to be able to watch it the same way. Perhaps I am impatient, but I really enjoy your channel.

Thank you,

Kelly Ventimiglia

Comment: I have HDTV, but I cannot pick up your HDTV broadcast. I have ominal directional antenna. I've heard that your HD braodcast is VHF channel 4. Would need special antenna (other than the one I have) to pick up your HD broadcast? I can pickup the other network HD channels just fine.

Thanks,

Comment: I recently purchased a HD digital falt panel. I don't have cable. Over-th-air stations are coming in exceptionally well except for FOX. I still receice the FOX analog signal, and the picture quality is "okay" at best, but the FOX digital signal isn't there. ABC, CBS, NBC and the four KET stations come in fine. ??

Comment: I am curious as to why I cannot receive the WDKY broadcast on DIRECTTV in HD? Is this a technical hurdle (either at your facilities or those of DIRECTTV) or is this another issue? I have all kinds of programming in HD on my receiver and it seems the local stations are in the minority of those still being broadcast in old standard definition. I must admit that it certainly makes me a lot less likely to watch programming on your station with so much more high definition available. I am coming to the point where I would rather pay a small download fee to watch FOX shows in HD from another source than watch a SD signal. I have seen markets smaller than Lexington being moved to HD on DIRECTTV which makes me wonder what is going on?

I live in Lawrenceburg, and the signal is just too weak here with an outdoor antenna. I am really frustrated at this point.

Thanks for your time,

Donny Hendry

Comment: I have great difficulty getting Fox reception from my analog televisions. I recently installed the digital converters and also purchased a new digital TV. I cannot get your station to come in at all on the digital. Fox is my favorite station and I must have reception. What do you advise? Do I need better antennas? I fear when the stations all turn to digital I won't be able to view Fox anymore. Please help. Thank you.

Comment: We purchased digital converters for our TVs, and have successfully programmed them to receive all stations through them except yours. I called Radio Shack and did everything they said, no luck. They said to contact you as the signal may be weak or you may not be fully converted to digital yet. I can still pull you in through my antennae but obviously only until February. Any ideas?

Comment: I live near Dunbar High School in Lexington and have been using a converter box to receive digital signals. I receive the signal for WLEX and WTVQ consistently. I very rarely can pick up WKYT. I can receive KET if I adjust my indoor amplified antenna. I am never able to pick up WDKY. (I can pick up FOX news from Louisville sometimes)

Are you planning to increase the power of your digital signal before Feb. 2009 when the switch to all digital is scheduled to occur ?

We watch it more often than any other and will miss the programs you offer when it goes strictly digital in February. Thanks.
